A very heavy shower, accompanied by a terrific gale, passed over our village last Sunday morning, just as our good people were preparing for church. No serious damage was done, save small congregations at the various places of worship.

Dr. Pernald is still finding diseased cows in our vicinity. He killed one for Walton Wight Monday, that was badly diseased, and anyone who has any scruples about having their animals tested should have seen the lungs that were taken from that cow.

Byron Cummings.

Crystal Swan.

Gertrude Eldridge.

Absent one-half day.

Robert Young.

Allice French.

The Fourth passed off rather quietly, or rather the last three quarters of it. Of course young America was on deck, and when the midnight hour was sounded our good people awoke to a realization of the fact that the 4th of July was at hand, and that for the rest of the night at least, they were to be entertained by the celebrators.

Church bells rang, whistles blew, horns shrieked, cannon crackers terrified the natives. In the morning however, all was peace and quietness. Many picnic parties were formed in various places in and about town, and in the evening a large number of people went to Songo Pond and enjoyed a beautiful display of fireworks at the expense of those who have cottages there: T. F. Hastings, E. H. Young, Benj. Goodwin and A. C. Frost.

The Reunion.

To those of our readers, who have a warm spot in their hearts for Gould's Academy, and who look back with so much joy and pride to the good old days spent in connection with that institution, we desire to say that everything is being done that can be done, to make the reunion of its teachers and students which is to take place on Aug. 9, one grand success.

What more fitting celebration of "Old Home Week" could be had, for truly all of Bethel's loyal sons and daughters are former students of Gould's Academy, and this reunion will serve as a powerful drawing card to bring them home at the time when thousands of people from all over our country are flocking to their old homes in the Pine Tree State.

As we have said, everything is being done to insure a grand success and you, who have bidden adieu to the beautiful hills of Old Oxford, and have entered the arena of life in other towns and other States throughout the country; who have often yearned within you for another taste of your youthful days; who have often longed to meet the old friends and associates with whom you have enjoyed so many pleasant days; who have often wished that you might again take a stroll through the fields and pastures once so familiar to you, and visit some of those places which, perchance, are the dearest spots to you in all the world, the very recollections of which bring a fresh draught from the spring of youth and cause your hearts to leap for joy, are about to have an opportunity afforded you to enjoy the privileges for which you have longed these many years.

This reunion will be one of the grandest events that has ever taken place during the history of Bethel, and will bring together schoolmates and friends who have been separated for years. Two thousand invitations have been sent out, and letters of acceptance are pouring in from all parts of the country. If you are a former student of Gould's Academy and have not decided to attend this reunion, decide to do so at once. An interesting program is being provided, which we hope to give in our columns in the near future.

There will be a meeting of the Reunion Committee, at the office of Herrick & Park, Wednesday evening, July 18, at 7:45 o'clock.

Every member of the Committee is expected to be present. The chairman of all the committees are requested to be present and prepared to report. Let the various committees take note of this and be ready to render a full report at that time.

MINISTERS' CORNER.

CONGREGATIONAL.

"For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 3:11.

This is a very positive statement concerning the place that Jesus Christ occupies both in society and in religion. The statement is so clear and so unequivocal, that there is no reason for any middle ground relative to the acceptance of it. It isn't a half truth. It is either true or false. The results of critical investigation, the testimony of history, the effects and results of Christian teaching and effort, the faith and experience of the human heart, all that we know of the character of Paul, lead us to the conclusion that it is not the noise of any blatant enthusiast, it is not the trick of a religious excitement, it is not the blind guess of superstition, that brings us on to the same ground, and to the same point as Paul, but the voice of reason, of history, of experience, and the basal need of society and religion.

METHODIST.

Rev. Mr. Chapman of California occupied the pulpit in the morning, preaching from the text: Psalms 146:5—"Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God."

The sermon was practical, earnest and spiritual. Mr. Chapman dwelt upon the true and false estimates of what true happiness consisted in, showing that true blessedness can only come from one source; he dwelt upon the necessity of a thorough consecration of all our powers to the service of God, this being the great need of the age, the chief end of life being character.

In the evening a good sized audience gathered to hear Miss Sibyl Abbott talk on the work of the "Freedman's Aid Society" in the South. Miss Abbott has been nineteen years in Clark University of Atlanta, Georgia, as a teacher, and speaks from experience. She dwelt upon the need of the work, illustrating each point fully. Her address was listened to with interest, and at the close an offering was taken up for the work there.

UNIVERSALIST.

In the fourth verse of the third chapter of the first epistle of Peter, it speaks of "The hidden man of the heart." It is impossible for us to give a complete description of one of our fellowmen. We may be familiar with his personal appearance, and well aware of his reputation. However that may be, he really lives in two worlds, one of which is beyond your ken. There is still "The hidden man of the heart;" so each of us lives in his own peculiar inner-world. Autobiographies are likely to be unsatisfactory, especially if they attempt to give us "soul-history." There was more in the love you felt, than in the love you told. There was more in the contrition that wrung your heart, than in the confession that sought to declare it, however honest. There are fears and hopes, and dreams and aspirations, exaltations and depressions of spirit, which we could not tell, fully, for they are beyond expression; they belong to "The hidden man of the heart." We sometimes speak of the world in which a man lives, meaning his circumstances, surroundings, privileges, fortunes. It is an interesting question we raise concerning him, but one of vastly more interest and consequence, is the question: "What kind of a world is it, in which the man is living, where we do not see him acting? What of the man behind the curtain, whom none can see, save self and God?" Let us consider the fact that it is from the hidden man that the principal influence of our life is exerted. That was what St. Peter was thinking, when he wrote the words of our text.

We think, perhaps, that we have found God in the Bible, in the movements of history, in the laws of nature, by the leadings of science, in the "day that uttereth speech," in the night that show-eth knowledge," and the discovery is a real one, but if we have found him no where else, He can hardly be sufficient to us, as a friend. If you have found Him in your heart, then there is power there. Power to bring certain wishes, desires, intents, into subjection to the right. In other words: There is character there, which means that day by day, duty is becoming more evident, and truth more luminous, and faith more firm. It means the blessings of a "pure heart that is able to see God," that vision which lifts itself up through the mists and the damps of this our earthly life, revealing itself to this "Hidden man of the heart."

CHURCH NOTES.

METHODIST.

The Rev. W. B. Eldridge with several members of the local chapter of the Epworth League are attending the County Convention of the League at Mechanic Falls Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

The Ladies' Church Aid Society meets to-morrow afternoon at half past two with Mrs. Davis Lovejoy.

CONGREGATIONAL.

The Ladies' Club will meet with Mrs. Varley on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A Beginning.

The Sabbath school was organized in Gloucester, a town of England, a little more than a hundred years ago.

Robert Raikes, going back and forth to his printing-office, saw, with distress, what crowds of idle, quarrelling, profane children were in the streets. He asked a woman standing in her door, if matters were always so bad.

"On Sundays," she said, "it is a great deal worse."

Mr. Raikes was not a man to go by on the other side when he saw a duty before him; he hired a room, and gathered the children in. The notion spread; and that Sunday-school, organized in 1730, was the beginning of a work so great and so needed.

Democratic County Convention.

The Democrats of Oxford County will hold a convention in the Court house at South Paris, on Wednesday, July 18, 1900, at ten of the clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of nominating candidates for two Senators, Judge of Probate, Register of Probate, County Attorney, County Commissioner, County Treasurer, and Sheriff; also to choose a new County Committee.

WHAT A BLESSING.

Many of Our Readers are Learning to Appreciate.

What a blessing it is. Sought after by thousands. Many a miserable man is happy now. Nights of unrest, days of trouble. An itching skin disease means this. Itching Piles mean it. Eczema just as bad, and just as hard to cure.

But Doan's Ointment relieves at once, and cures all itching of the skin. A blessing to a suffering public. Here's proof to back our statement. Mr. Samuel Carr, of 8 School street, Haverhill, Mass., says: "I procured Doan's Ointment for an eruption on my leg which caused me considerable anxiety. The treatment gave satisfactory results and warrants me in saying that Doan's Ointment acts up to the representations made for it."

Doan's Ointment for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitutes.

Tastes of Well Known Women.
Among famous beauties and artists who have been questioned on the diet they find most favorable to good work and "good looks" is Mrs. Sarah Grand. She cannot drink milk. "I never forget the horrible cow," she sympathetically remarks. John Oliver Hobbes tried vegetarianism for two years, but now finds "on the whole that the ordinary diet of the country is the best." Mrs. Kendal votes for a bath once if not twice a day. Miss Marie Corelli spikes journalistic inquisitors' guns with the very pertinent quotation from "Hamlet," "I eat the air, promise crammed, you cannot feed capons so." Miss Lily Hanbury confesses that she flourishes best on the "plainest food and a good salary." Miss Winifred Emery says, "My principal food all my life has been meat, and I find that sustains me better than any other thing when I am working hard."

A Habit to Be Avoided.
Attention is called to those essentially feminine habits of putting pins in the mouth or moistening a pencil with the lips.

A pin swallowed means only a surgical case, but the greater danger lies in the contagion that may be lurking in the pin itself. Under the head of the pin or in the point of the pencil all kinds of malignant germs may be located, which will be transmitted by the mouth quicker than any other way. It hardly seems possible that any one needs to be cautioned against holding money between his lips, yet a person can scarcely go any distance on a street car without noticing some one indulging in this dangerous and filthy habit.

Denver Flower Mission.
The women in charge of the Denver Flower mission send nurses to patients of every creed and nationality, the only requisite being that a person should be ill and poor. This free nursing of the poor accomplishes two objects of especial value—by instruction and disinfection it prevents the spread of disease, and by enabling the breadwinner of the family to continue at his work it prevents much pauperism.

Women Farmers.
The English Agricultural Association For Women has begun the publication of The Woman's Agricultural Times to interest the women of the world in agricultural pursuits and make of women intelligent farmers.

How to Make Tea.
This recipe is given by his excellency Yu Ting Fang, Chinese minister to Washington, who says that Americans do not know how to make tea:

"There are no bad teas; some are better than others. Use green or black as you see fit. Now place in a teapot a sufficient quantity of tea leaves and pour upon it hot water. Let this stand for four or five minutes to allow for thorough infusion, and then you have a drink for the gods. That is all there is to it. No rum, no sugar, no lemon, no milk. Drink it warm, not hot."

How to Curry Oysters.
Melt two ounces of butter in a saucepan, blend with it a tablespoonful of curry powder, a dessertspoonful of flour and fry till brown, stirring all the time. Add the liquor from a tin of oysters, a squeeze of lemon juice and a little milk. Stir the sauce while it boils up. Set the oysters in it and let them slowly heat through. Serve with a border of boiled rice.

The Soul of a Brute

By RODRIGUES OTTOLENGUI,
Author of "An Artist In Crime," "A Conflict of Evidence," "The Crime of the Century," etc.

One night, pondering over this, I began to wonder why it is that the religionists deny to animals the possession of a soul? Yet surely they are inconsistent, for do they not claim that pure love is the highest attribute of the soul? And is not the love of a dog for his master the very purest and highest type? To me at least the argument was convincing on that night as my dog and I cuddled up together on my bed. I named my pet Psyche.

Shortly after my arrival I met Martha Temple. With a precipitancy often exhibited by my sex, I at once fell in love with her. I have no reason to give for this, and now, in the retrospective, it appears to me that I must have been temporarily out of my mind. The woman is totally devoid of all that I have usually considered to be requisite in one who could command my love. Yet so it was. I showered her with attentions which, despite her evidence, she was nothing loath to accept. I thought that she was destined to be mine till Philip Norton came upon the scene.

You might suppose from the evidence that this man was a good fellow, as indeed it was his constant aim to appear. In truth, he was a heartless, cruel scoundrel. He loved Martha Temple and became insanely jealous of myself. Yet he was too much of the cunning rogue to let this appear openly to her and too much of a coward to woo her publicly before me. His was one of those atrophied souls which vent their spite upon the innocent dumb brutes that chance to be present during their rage. Thus it was, I think, that Norton first kicked Psyche. It was in sheer wantonness. Some one, however, reported the fact to me, and in a rage I went to Norton and remonstrated with him. Then he saw that by injuring the dog he could wound me. Again I heard of his kicking Psyche, and I probably used the threatening language attributed to me on the stand. But I ask you: When a man is angry, does he always weigh his words? Do not all of us at times threaten more than we would execute?

I come now to the day upon which I asked Martha Temple to be my wife. I see now how ridiculous that was. She had known Norton before they met here, and she loved him. At first she accepted my attentions as a pastime. Later, when he came, it was done to incite him through jealousy to a proposal. She refused me and laughed at my suit. In an unenviable frame of mind I sought my dog. Poor beast! I had been neglecting her for this heartless woman, and now in my misery I felt that I had been recreant to my love for the only being who loved me. I imagine my feelings when I discovered Psyche hiding under my bed, moaning piteously. I drew her out, and as she licked my hand with her tongue I discovered that her leg was broken. I rushed down stairs and made inquiries. I learned that Norton had injured Psyche by striking her with a stick, as has been told. I then searched for Norton. I have no hesitation in saying that had I found him alone I might have murdered him. I was so enraged that I had almost lost control of myself. I had almost, for when I found him with Martha Temple I did prevent myself from killing him on the spot. This was only because of her presence. Yet we quarreled violently, as she claimed.

Two days later Psyche disappeared altogether. Naturally I accused Norton of having something to do with this. He laughed at me, even jeered at me for "moping after a brute beast." Those were his words.

The days went by, and nothing was heard of Psyche. Did I say nothing was heard of her? I should mention here that often at night I would fancy that I heard her moaning. I would follow the direction of the cry, but it always led me to the edge of the lake and then died away. I concluded that it was my imagination.

This brings me to the night of the 12th. The boy was accurate in stating that all four oars were in the boat. Noticing this myself as I passed the place, I took them out and carried them to my boat-house. Then I went to the hotel. As I was going into my room Norton made a jeering remark across the hall. His door was open. I went in, and we quarreled again, as we had done several times since my dog's disappearance. At last I left him and went into my own room. But the occurrence had unnerved me, and I went out again, hoping that a walk would quiet me. I had scarcely ventured out when I thought that I heard Psyche moaning. I dismissed it as fancy and resolutely turned my back. But as I did so the cry sounded louder. Looking around, I was amazed to see Psyche herself lying a little way ahead of me on the ground. Delighted that she had returned, I called to her, but she did not respond. She continued to moan. I approached her, when she jumped up and hurried ahead, limping. I followed, trying to coax her to me, but in vain. Finally she reached the shore where my boat was tied and, to my surprise, scrambled into it. Thinking that she was frightened, but sure now that I should catch her, I did likewise. In some way the paler slipped from the stake, and before I realized it we were drifting away.

The rest of this experience I do not pretend to explain. I can only relate it. As I reached forth to grasp Psyche she sprang out of the boat into the water. Then she swam to where the painter dragged and, taking it in her mouth, started toward Deer Island. I know that this was against a strong current and the teeth of a heavy windstorm and that it is unbelievable that a dog could swim a mile, dragging a boat. In fact, that is why I did not go upon the witness stand and tell my tale. No one would believe it, yet it is the solemn truth. I tried to pull her back by the rope, but the effort was useless. I had no oars, so was powerless. After a time we reached Deer Island. Psyche at once started into the bushes. Determined to see the affair out, I followed till we reached a bit of thicker brush, into which she dashed and disappeared. I forced my way through, and there in the middle of a clearing I saw a ghastly sight. I saw it clearly, for at that very moment the clouds parted, and the moon lighted the scene. Psyche was tied fast to a birch tree and lay dead, with a gaunt, terrible expression in her eyes that told me she had starved. Horrified, I hurried back to the boat and jumped in. The impetus pushed it out into the lake, and the current, as has been correctly testified, carried me south, landing me just at the dock, as the same drift had taken the young miller's boat.

All night I tossed in restless delirium, and early in the morning I must have dropped into a fitful sleep. I know that I awakened suddenly, and as the whole horrible thing came back to me it was impossible to say whether it had been a reality or a dream. In this mood I started for Deer Island, taking Hamilton with me. I asked him to get my short oars and was surprised when he reported that they were not in the boat-house. I was also astonished to find them floating at Deer Island. I discovered my poor dog tied fast to the birch, just as I had seen her the night before. Then I knew that the villain Norton had murdered her. I say murdered, for to deprive a soul of its earthly existence is to commit murder, and surely my dog had a soul, else how could she have warned me of her sad fate? I was amazed but not sorry to see Norton's dead body floating near the shore. There was a realization in my heart that he had met with retributive justice in dying at the very place where Psyche's soul had departed.

How he came to his death and how he happened to be at Deer Island I know no more than you do. But if I should venture upon a theory it would be that when I came ashore he saw me and fancied that I had been searching for my dog. Thinking that I might go to Deer Island, he may have determined to go there himself and remove the carcass of the poor beast which he had slain. Then perhaps he got my long oars and went to the island. In some way he was drowned, and the oars floated into the bushes and the boat out into the lake till found by the miller's son. But, I wonder, did Psyche's soul lure him to his doom?

GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT.

Originated in New Jersey More Than Thirty Years Ago.
The great movement for improved roads in the United States originated, it is generally believed, in Essex county, N. J., more than 30 years ago. Some progressive men in the board of freeholders conceived the idea of building a system of hard roads by the new, adam process, and a special act was passed constituting a road board. The bulk of the cost was assessed upon the county at large and was provided for in the annual taxes. Newark paid four-fifths of this tax. There was much opposition and constant protest, but the work went resolutely on.

The good results soon became evident. East Orange, Montclair and other suburbs attracted the best class of population, and handsome houses went up by the hundreds, while property prices enormously increased. The roads built were of excellent workmanship and excited the wonder and admiration of strangers who drove over them. Union county subsequently procured a law for county aid to road building, and the work was prosecuted there with the same energy and good results. This led to the enactment of the law for state aid, under which hundreds of miles of new improved roads have been built in all sections of the state. In Essex county the improvement has gone on under the state aid act until the county is a network of good roads. For road improvements projected for the present year the county will pay about $55,000.

The law imposes one-third of the cost of new roads on the state, 10 percent on the property owners and the balance on the county. By the new law townships can petition independently of the board of freeholders for state aid, and this will promote road building in counties which have been backward by reason of the unwillingness of the county authorities to assume the county's share of the cost.

SAUCES FOR MEATS.

How to Make Several Savory and Appetizing Varieties.

Mint Sauce.—Wash the leaves of mint, dry them and chop them very fine. Put them in a bowl. Add two teaspoonfuls of granulated sugar. Rub well and then add four tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Stir until the sugar is dissolved. Strain and serve.

Mushroom Sauce.—Put one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan, brown lightly. Add one tablespoonful of flour, a teaspoonful of onion, one bay leaf and half a pint of stock. Stir constantly until boiling. Then cover and stand over hot water for ten minutes. After straining add half a can of mushrooms, half a teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of pepper. Cover and let stand again over hot water for ten minutes. Serve.

Tomato Sauce.—Mix one tablespoonful of butter and one of flour in a saucepan. When smooth, add half a pint of strained tomatoes, a quarter of a teaspoonful of celery seed and one bay leaf. Stir steadily until boiling; then add half a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of paprika, strain and serve.

Caper Sauce.—Mix two tablespoonfuls of butter and two of flour in a saucepan. When smooth, add one pint of the water in which the meat was boiled. Stir until it boils. Add one teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of capers, a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper and a few drops of onion juice. Bread Sauce.—Cook a slice of onion with a clove or two and half a cup of fine bread crumbs from the center of the loaf in a pint of milk an hour over hot water. Remove the onion and cloves, add two tablespoonfuls of butter and a scant half teaspoonful of salt.

How to Fry Chicken.

Clean and joint the birds and soak them in salt and water for two hours. Put into the frying pan equal parts of lard and butter, enough to cover the chicken as it cooks. Roll each piece in beaten egg and cracker crumbs and drop into the boiling fat. Fry brown on both sides and serve on a platter garnished with parsley. Pour most of the fat from the frying pan, thicken the remainder with flour after adding to it a cupful of boiling water or milk and serve in a gravy boat.

How to Eat.

Take your food slowly and merrily. This piece of advice should be printed in very big, black letters on very white cardboard and hung up in every dining room. Thorough mastication, says the doctor, is of the utmost importance, and of course this necessitates a proper condition of the teeth. Gastric digestion is often weakened and much distress often caused by ingestion of too much food with the food, particularly at the beginning of a meal. Another danger causing dyspepsia is the habit of eating food in silence or without that mirth and good fellowship so necessary to insure a favorable condition for the normal action of the digestive organs. These little details may seem unimportant, but undoubtedly it is the duty of every careful physician to instruct his patients to regard them.

How to Prepare Salt Codfish.

Gradually heat to boiling point one pint of salt codfish picked into small pieces and covered with cold water; then drain. Melt one-fourth cupful of butter and cook in it one-fourth cupful of flour until frothy. Then add gradually one pint of rich milk, stirring constantly. Put in the fish and let stand over hot water 10 or 15 minutes. Just before serving stir in two slightly beaten eggs.

How to Bake Haddock.

Choose a medium sized haddock. Clean the fish and remove the eyes. Make a forcemeat with two tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, half an ounce of butter, a little very finely chopped parsley, pepper and salt and a little milk if necessary to moisten the whole. Fill the fish with this, sew it up and truss securely in S shape. Flour the fish, brush it over with egg and sprinkle with bread raspings. Bake in a moderate oven for about half an hour. Serve on a hot dish. Add a few drops of lemon juice to the gravy, and when very hot pour it round the fish.

How to Bake Shad Roe.

Put shad roe into boiling water, adding one teaspoonful of vinegar and one teaspoonful of salt. Cook for 15 minutes. Pour off the water and cover with cold water. Let stand several minutes. Rest the roe in a buttered pan with one-half pint of tomato sauce. Bake 15 minutes in a hot oven, basting often. Remove to a platter and pour around one cupful of tomato sauce.

THE HOME.

A Presence.

What is "sweetest of the sweet,"
That we on life's pathway meet?
You the answer quick divine;
Oh, 'tis Nature's warm sunshine.
Brightest sunshine oft may be
Where the sun we fail to see;
Oft may beam from loving eye,
Though no sun be in the sky.
So a presence oft may shed Brightest gleam where'er it spread;
And when we such sunshine meet,
'Tis the "sweetest of the sweet."

An Emergency Cupboard.

Every house should have an emergency cupboard, well supplied with bandages and all manner of simple home remedies, to be used in time of accident or illness.A neat little cupboard of hard wood, with compartments and shelves for the various articles, will be found much more convenient, but one or two shelves or drawers in a bathroom, or even in an ordinary clothes-dress, can be made to answer all practical purposes.Among the actual necessities for such a cupboard are rolls of old linen, cotton, and flannel, which are frequently needed for accidents or illness, absorbent cotton, a fountain syringe, a hot-water bag, a small alcohol lamp, a package of mustard plasters already prepared, court plasters, and surgeon's sticking plaster, and a pair of scissors, are all essential articles in an emergency cupboard.It is a good thing to have a large bottle of Pond's extract, or witch hazel, on hand, in case of sprains, a box of baking soda to be used for burns, flaxseed meal for poultices, and boracic acid for prickly heat.Alcohol, camphor, vaseline, and olive oil are used for a variety of troubles, and it is not safe to be without them.Olive oil is frequently prescribed for young and old suffering from severe colds or lung difficulties.Malted milk is another simple and wholesome article which ought not to be left out of our cupboard. It is much liked by children and invalids, and is very nourishing. Sweet spirits of nitre ought not to be forgotten for mosquito bites.This may seem like a long list of "actual necessities." What one may need another may not. Many women are absolutely lacking in all knowledge that pertains to sickness, and the consequence is that a physician must be called in every time any member is indisposed, be it ever so little.An emergency cupboard may seem but a trifling, almost useless, piece of furniture to many people, but it is a most important one,
and, if economy must be practised, luxuries can be dispensed with more easily than these necessities.Forethought and presence of mind has saved many a life in time of sudden illness or a serious accident.It is not a difficult thing to learn to roll and apply a bandage, to prepare a poultice or simple gruels, and what applications are best for burn or scald.If there are young children in the family there is always a liability to accidents, and it should be the first education of the mother to acquire a knowledge of simple aids and remedies, or if hired nurses or other help are to remain in charge, they should be instructed to meet emergencies with prompt aid.

The Child's Confidence.

To retain his confidence, the mother should make her child feel that she, of all the world, is his wisest, best, most sympathetic friend.The ideal is high, and the mother, striving to reach it will need to exercise much firmness and self-control. She will be careful never to wound his feelings by harshness, or hurt his self-respect by ridicule, or rouse his resentment by injustice. She will try to make him understand that her greatest desire for him is that he shall grow to be an unselfish, honest, manly man.To this end she will, when he is in a softened mood, talk with him seriously about his faults, telling him how necessary it is that he should overcome them, and show-ing him that this is why she sometimes has to reprove or discipline him. She will let him see very plainly that it hurts her to inflict such discipline upon him, and she would so much rather he would do right without it. He must feel that she is sincere, and that she longs to put into his life all the happiness possible.Last, but not least, he should be encouraged to tell his mother everything; and she must listen with interest to everything that interests him.The tendency to gossip may be discouraged by taking a charitable view of the thing that has attracted his attention, or by passing it over lightly and then diverting his thoughts.The child who has no reserves from his mother unconsciously arms her for guarding him against the evil in the world. She sees into his mind on the one hand, and knows, on the other, the influences that surround him.—Elizabeth Robbins.

Things a Mother Should Do.

She should not forget that if she treats her boy as a gentleman, she will do much toward making him a gentleman.She should not treat her boy to perpetual frowns, scoldings and fault findings. "Sugar attracts more flies than vinegar." Love wins her boy to a noble manhood.She should never be so busy or hard pressed for time that she cannot listen to him. If he lives to be a man he, all too soon, will leave her. She should make the most of him while she has him.She should encourage outdoor exercise or sports, and she should not forget to train him with proper regard for his personal appearance.She should never allow him to form such habits as coming to the table in his shirt sleeves, neglecting his nails or teeth, or carrying soiled handkerchiefs about with him.She should never nag him or forget that he is a creature of reason not an animal that requires to be driven.She should not try to break her boy's will, be thankful that he is manly enough to have a mind of his own.—Farm, Furnace and Factory.John Ruskin, in answer to the question, "When does the education of a child begin?" replied: "At six months old it can answer smile with smile, and impatience with impatience. It can observe, enjoy, and suffer acutely, and in a measure, intelligently. Do you suppose it makes no difference to it that the order of the house is perfect and quiet, the faces of its father and mother full of peace, their soft voices familiar to its ear, and even those of strangers loving, or that it is tossed from arm to arm, among hard or reckless or vain minded persons, in the gloom of a vicious house or the confusion of a gay and boisterous one?"

Items From Table Talk.

The housewife is supplied with many beautiful and labor saving requisites in these days. Paper dollies have reached high art in texture and beauty of design. As instance, the latest are exact imitations of linen with hemstitched edges and borders, the latter perfect copies of Mexican drawn work.
The convenience of this lace paper napery can scarcely be estimated. In all sizes—round, square and oval—they suit every purpose and dish for table service. Under salads, ices and cakes they are quite as pretty and scarcely distinguishable from art linen, without the trouble of laundering afterward.
The paper dollies, exquisite as they are, may be obtained at a price which warrants once using and throwing away, which is a great advantage.A clever hostess not long since outdid her reputation for originality by serving terrapin in individual chafing dishes, a tiny spirit lamp burning under each one.At ladies' luncheons little baskets of genuine black bark at each cover hold candied cherries or cream dipped Al-meria grapes. Green leaves are ingeniously folded in horn of plenty shapes and placed on tiny flat plates of cut glass to hold unluh'd strawberries.

To Clean Upholstered Furniture.

Brush the articles and beat the dust out first with a thin cane, then rub the upholstery all over with dry bran and a flannel. This is a treatment that should not be denied upholstered furniture during the spring cleaning, as it radically improves its appearance.

The Birthplace of Our Independence.

A visit was paid the other day where you may see the portraits of the signers, the chairs in which used and a lot of other things, chief of which, of course, is the

but the old place that had been made as new was cool—so cool that even the fat policeman who guards the medals that are for sale and the registry book wherein visitors inscribe their names looked as comfortable as the proverbial cucumber. Two young men who had wheeled half way across the continent had just left their autographs."How many visitors do you have in the course of the day?" was asked."Oh, they are coming and going all the time—they'll average about three hundred a day, I guess.""And on the Fourth of July? Is there a crowd here all day?""It's about the same as at other places—quite a number in the morning, but hardly anybody the rest of the day. So far as that goes, we had just as well shut up after twelve on the Fourth."So here it is in the very home of the Day, in the very centre which is within an hour or so of millions of good Americans.Then a look at the book! Visitors from every part of the world, from every State in the Union, from country and city, a wide area of land and humanity!So the interest exists. It is Lib-be said of the way in which it is celebrated, there can be no question about the earnestness that underlies the occasion, no doubt as to the conviction of nearly eighty millions of people that floats and the biggest and the best thing in the way of government that history has ever known.

IS IT RIGHT

For an Editor to Recommend Patent Medicines?From Sylvan Valley News, Brevard, N. C.
It may be a question whether the editor of the newspaper has the right to publicly recommend any of the various proprietary medicines which flood the market, yet as a preventive of suffering we feel it a duty to say a good word for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. We have known and used this medicine in our family for twenty years and have always found it reliable. In many cases a dose of this remedy would save hours of suffering while a physician is awaited. We do not believe in depending implicitly on any medicine for a cure, but we do believe that if a bottle of Chamberlain's Diarrhoea Remedy were kept on hand and administered at the inception of an attack, much suffering might be avoided and in very many cases the presence of a physician would not be required. At least this has been our experience during the past twenty years.For sale by G. R. Wiley, Bethel;

Yet He Wasn't Stingy.

"Stinginess is one thing and an observance of excessive nicety in financial details is another," said a western man who is worth a good deal of money. "As an example I will cite a rich old uncle I once had. He was a millionaire and not stingy, but he watched the pennies like a hawk, and he was so exacting that everybody said he was the meanest man in the county, but he wasn't, for he gave away $10,000 a year in various charities that he would not let the recipients mention.""But to the case in point. One day I asked him for a nickel for car fare, telling him I would return it when I got some change, but I forgot all about it. Three months after that it occured to the old gentleman to be very nice to his five nephews and nieces, and at Christmas four of them received checks for $5,000 each, while mine was for $4,999.95. It was just his way, don't you see? I owed him that nickel, and he wanted it."—Washington Star.BEST FOR THE Broken Brie-a-Braes.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's Cement.
One multitude who use this standard article know that it is a surety hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why.
The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are too expensive and do not allow large profits.
Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $2.50 per pound and another costs $1.50 a gallon, while a large share of the so-called cements and liquid put upon the market are nothing more than sixteen cent glue dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials.
Major's cement retails at fifteen cents and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make larger profits.
The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement.
And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr.
Major's advertising, which now amounts to over $500,000 a month, throughout the country.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, 1900.

A witty or blundering Irishman affirms that more than half the people who remain in Ireland, leave it to earn their living by dying for the British Crown.

Only France, Germany, and Australia now have more gold per capita than the United States. Only France and the Netherlands have more silver per capita than the United States.

The teaching of vertical penmanship has been discarded by the school authorities of New York, on the grounds that it is not practical, is not liked by business men, and that it is slow of execution.

Two billions two hundred millions of dollars was the value of our foreign commerce during the fiscal year just ended, of which American vessels carried 7 per cent.—foreign ships carrying 93 per cent. and earning $200,000,000 at the expense of the American people.

Yes, it is a fact that those 1400 Cuban teachers who have come to Boston for study, receive much better pay at their post of duty in Cuba than is received by a large per cent. of our American teachers. It may be interesting to know that the lowest wages paid to the teachers of Havana is $900 per year.

"Sink or swim," especially if we sink; "live or die," especially if we die; "survive or perish," especially if we perish—let us give our hands and our hearts to the declaration that a ratio of 34 to 1 is the same thing as a ratio of 16 to 1.—New York World.

As a matter of fact, the mere wording of the Democratic platform counts for little. The attitude of the party is known and it is a question whether it would not lose more than it would gain by any weakness on silver. Whatever anyone may say or wish, silver is as dead as slavery and the result of this fall will turn on the expansion issue, which is very much alive.

The people understand Bryan to-day better than they have ever understood him before, and whatever else may be said of him, he cannot be accused of being a demagogue, caring only for success, for had he been such, he doubtless would have yielded to the overmastering desire of the delegates on the 16 to 1 plank. Evidently he would rather be what he considers right than to be president.

The results of Philadelphia's Fourth to date, are ten dead and three hundred in the hospitals. Accepting that as a fair indication of what took place all over the country, the casualty record was enough to make a nation mourn on the 5th for its strenuous rejoicing on the 4th. Yet we shall doubtless repeat the program, perhaps on an enlarged scale, another year. The Providence Journal truly observes that "loss of life in this fashion is unspeakably wicked. It is simply a relapse of civilization into barbarism. Our descendants may yet look back with wonder and horror at our conception of patriotism and the right way of showing it." But we must apparently live and act out our folly, and continue to make sacrifices of life and limb in order to produce noise and force for their own exorable sakes.—Boston Transcript.

The nomination of E. C. Park, Esq. for the office of county attorney by acclamation at the Republican County convention held at Paris, July 3, is not only a testimony to the esteem in which he is held by the republican party in the county, but also to his ability as an attorney and his fitness for the office to which he will be elected in September. Mr. Park was born in Mexico in 1864, the son of Henry W. Park. He attended the common school of that town and also Hebron Academy, graduating from the latter in 1887. He then began the study of law and was admitted to the Oxford county bar, in 1890. He soon entered into partnership with A. E. Herrick of Bethel, and by close application to his profession he has come to occupy a prominent position among the lawyers of Oxford county, and one who enjoys the utmost esteem of the united bar. He has always been a staunch republican, and has for several years been chairman of the republican town committee of Bethel, and also the republican county committee. He married Miss May I. Stearns of Paris, and one daughter has blessed the union. Mr. Park is known through the county as a man true to his convictions, one determined to do the right as he knows the right, regardless of prejudice or policy, and as such he will make a man ably fitted for the position for which he has been nominated.

The Review of Reviews for July says of Governor Roosevelt that he has made no sacrifice of principle, that, "Through all his public life he has shown himself willing to do hard work steadfastly in positions where no one could accuse him of seeking anything else except the service of his country through his party. It is exactly in that spirit that he yielded his own preferences at Philadelphia to what finally came to him as a unanimous party demand. We do not believe the sacrifice ought to have been demanded; but doing what he believes to be his duty has become a fixed habit with Theodore Roosevelt. His friends will not for a moment attribute to him any reason for changing his decision at Philadelphia other than his belief that it was his duty. The party to which he now shows such loyalty will have a strong sense of allegiance to him in return. He will be forty-six years old on October 27, 1904. If one must indulge in predictions, it is far safer to prophesy that he has thirty-five or forty years of active and valuable public life than to assume that the Vice-Presidency would necessarily end his political career."

The Motherly Kiss.
When Mrs. Kendal speaks in public she invariably charms her hearers with her delightful diction, her vivacity and general expressiveness, says Harper's Bazar; also at times she lays herself open to criticism by a too confidentially personal note, which is in marked contrast to the fine restraint of her acting. There was a pretty moment at the Empire theater recently when, taking advantage of a pause in her address to the graduates of the school of acting—a pause occasioned by applause—she crossed over to Sada Yacco and, with a greeting as cordial as it was spontaneous, gave the distinguished little foreigner a motherly kiss. "Dear little soul!" she exclaimed to her delighted audience. "I'm sure she doesn't understand one word in six that any one is saying."

Women at the Polls.
In the recent school elections in Ohio where there was any contest or any reason for women to vote their vote was heavy. Over 9,000 women registered in Cleveland. The only woman nominated in that city for the school board received 31,383 votes. The highest vote received by any man running on her ticket was 27,220. A woman was elected at Ravenna. Six hundred women voted in Youngstown. Both of these towns heretofore have been exceedingly conservative. The Cleveland Leader said editorially, "A little bad weather will not prevent women from exercising their right of suffrage." In Canton 1,500 women voted.

"We have sold many different cough remedies, but none has given better satisfaction than Chamberlain's," says Mr. Charles Foltzhauser, Druggist, Newark, N.J. "It is perfectly safe and can be relied upon in all cases of coughs, colds or hoarseness."

ALL OVER -
M.A.I.N.E.
Dr. Dunlap of Ripley is the possessor of an animal that must be related to Barnum's "what-is-it." He is supposed to be a calf, but his body is covered with black wool with a little long hair on his belly, and a white star in his forehead. He has ears like a deer and a very long tail, which is about as big around as a good stick, and has a tassel of long white hair at the end.

A most horrible accident occurred in Lewiston last week when little Jennie, the two and one-half years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fortier, fell from a fourth story window, and dashed her brains out on the brick sidewalk, nearly 75 feet below. The child had climbed to the window by the means of a chair, and was sitting on the window stool with her feet in the chair, playing horse, when suddenly the screen against which she was leaning, gave way and she went backwards, striking her head upon the sidewalk below. The little body was not entirely lifeless when picked up but death occurred shortly afterward.

President McKinley's sister and niece are spending the month of July at the Mascott, Orr's Island. About the first of August they will be joined by President McKinley and in company with him will go to Poland Springs.

Percy Wirth of Lisbon Center was probably fatally injured, July 4, by the explosion of a cannon which he had made out of an old gun barrel. He had it mounted on a block of wood and touched it off with a match. It failed to explode and he turned around for another match. When he again bent over the cannon it exploded, part of it striking him on the head with terrific force, making a wound three inches deep. He was taken to the Central Maine Hospital, where it is said that the chances are against recovery, and even if he does, he will be blind.

Both mills of the Bridgton Lumber Company, with machinery were totally destroyed by a fire which started at 11 o'clock Saturday night. The fire was first seen in the shavings at the south end of the planing mill, and it is thought to have been of incendiary origin as there had been no one at work in the mill for hours. The dry house and several storehouses belonging to the mill as well as the yard full of sawed lumber were saved.

The Bangor police are making a search for Ralph H. House, son of Deputy State Labor Commissioner Charles J. House, who disappeared from his home in Augusta last Monday, and was thought to go to Bangor. Young House disappeared from home three years ago and was absent for some weeks, finally being discovered here at Bangor. He said at that time that he intended to kill himself and it is feared that he may carry out his desire on this occasion. House was a student in Colby college, when he disappeared three years ago, and it is thought that his mind became affected by overstudy.

Gould's Academy Reunion.
The Gould's Academy Reunion Committee wishes to obtain the name and address of every person who ever attended Gould's Academy. These names are wanted for two reasons. First, that invitations to the Reunion may be sent to all the old students; second, that the names may be placed upon the records of the institution.

During the sixty-four years that the school has been in operation, only about twenty-five catalogues have been published, and the Committee have not been able to obtain all of these, hence they lack the names of more than half of the former students of the school. If every ex-student of the school who sees this notice, will send his (or her) name and address to Prin. F. E. Hanscom, Bethel, Me., together with the names and addresses of all others of whom they have personal knowledge, they will be able to render assistance that can be obtained in no other way.

Great Men in Public Life.

Great men are as rare in politics as they are elsewhere, and are no more needed there than elsewhere. The main part of government is plain, practical business, and requires the same traits, faculties and methods as a great manufacturing or commercial enterprise. But the field is broader and the opportunities are more alluring. Government affairs concern every citizen, and the legislator with novel and forcible ideas, which he expresses in original and striking language, has an assured audience of as many millions as there are voters in the Republic. The bulk of our legislators and magistrates are men of fair average, every-day capacity, who would be content with the revenues of the leading attorney at the county seat or the teacher of languages or the principal tradesman in a country town.

It would, perhaps, be within bounds to say that the Speaker and twenty Representatives in each Congress have been the responsible architects and builders of our legislative fabric since the war. In the Senate, for obvious reasons, the proportion of influential participants is greater, but even here it is less than the majority.—Ex-Senator Ingalls, in The Saturday Evening Post.

What Becomes of Pennies.

It is estimated that there are 199,900,000 old style copper pennies somewhere. Nobody knows what has become of them except that once in a while a single specimen turns up in charge. A few years ago 4,500,000 bronze two-cent pieces were set afloat. Three millions of them are still outstanding, but are never seen. A million of three-cent silver pieces are scattered over the United States, but it is very seldom that one comes across any of them. Of the 800,000 one-half-cent pieces not one has been returned to the Government for coinage or is held by the Treasury.

GROVER HILL.

"All the air is filled with sound, soft, and sultry, and profound."

Friday evening June 29, parents and friends were invited to be present at the closing exercises of Grover Hill school. The term has been a profitable one under the instruction of Miss Ruby M. Smith. It is simply marvelous how so fine an entertainment could have been produced in one short week, and no time was taken from school work, rehearsing being done either at noontime or after school at night. The stage was very tastefully arranged for the occasion with ferns and flowers and presented quite a pretty scene. The parts so nicely rendered showed tireless zeal on the part of Miss Smith, and her pupils as well. The program was as follows:

Are Your Kidneys Sick

Here is an Easy Way to Find Out.

Be sure you need medicine before you take it, but having once found out that you need it—lose no time in getting the best. If it's for the Kidneys, Liver, Bladder or Blood, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Chronic Constipation, or the sickness peculiar to women, the best is Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and a very simple way to find out if you need it, is to put some urine in a glass tumbler and let it stand 24 hours; if it then has a sediment or a milky, cloudy appearance; if it is ropy or stringy, pale or discolored, you do not need a physician to tell you that, you should take Favorite Remedy at once. It speedily cures such dangerous symptoms as pain in the back, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night, burning and stinging in passing water, the staining of linen by your urine and all the unpleasant and dangerous effects produced on the system by the use of whiskey and beer. All druggists sell Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy at $1.00 a bottle, or 6 bottles for $5.00.

By a special and particular arrangement with the manufacturers, our readers can try this grand medicine absolutely free. By simply sending your full name and post office address to the Dr. David Kennedy Corporation, Rondout, N. Y., mentioning this paper, when a trial bottle of Favorite Remedy, together with a pamphlet of valuable medical advice, will be sent you by mail postpaid.

The publishers of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

CALIFORNIA LETTER.

Lordsburg, Cal., June, 1900.

DEAR FRIENDS:—We didn't come here for steady work, but want enough of it to give zest to the play time, so after the work was done, one day, I proposed to take a party to Live Oak Canon by a new way. The smile was broad at the thought of a "tenderfoot" finding anything that would be new to an old settler. However, they yielded, though the music of "I've been here before" was kept up until my live oak tree was reached, and I proposed going on up the hill.

"You can't get to Live Oak Canon that way," they declared.

"Oh well, here is a good road, and no doubt we shall find something interesting," I answered, and we climbed the long, steep ascent, coming out upon a large plateau that surprised us all.

The road wound around deep gullies, sometimes a deep one on each side, with now and then a level place where alfalfa was raised, the dry corks in the field awaiting the baling crew. We saw one of these crews at work in the distance and supposed it would wander all over the thousands of acres between the mountains, and pick up all the dried alfalfa. Here and there, a gentle slope would offer a tempting place for a prune or apricot orchard.

Many of the ravines and abrupt slopes were full of weeds, brush, or beautiful flowers. How they could grow in such dry dirt was a mystery to us, though the dew on the mountains, like the dew of Hermon, is almost rain. That beautiful child of the desert—the yucca—threw up its tall white spire at intervals, all over the higher hills, and going down a sharp pitch, we came across one so near the road that Mr. C. was importuned to cut it for us. He floundered through the thick grease wood brush, and standing above it, using the stalk as a protection to keep him from falling into the deep ravine, cut it with his sharp pruning knife, about even with his breast, and succeeded in landing it towards him. The part he brought to the carriage was eight feet or more long, and full of those lovely yucca bells. There were several hundred of the open flowers and many buds. It measured eight inches where he cut it off. We could count scores of these, standing erect as a church spire, where no foot but of rabbit or squirrel could reach them. We were so proud of our trophy that we gave up one seat in the carriage to it.

The "three miles" seemed long, but the scenery was grand. Mountains in every direction shut us in. Now and then, we could catch a glimpse of the outer world as we reached the top of an ascent.

All this time we had not passed a house, but after a long, hard climb we came to a pretty farm house with shade trees, and flowers, and dogs, and chickens. We knocked long and loud, and the dogs yelped in sympathy. At last, three little children put in an appearance—tear-stained and dirty. From them we learned that "Papa and three men were in the field," and that "Mamma and Aunt Alice had gone to town."

Is this the end of the road? "No." Can we get to Live Oak Canon this way? "Yes, you go up there (through the barnyard) and then you go through an orchard (apricot) and through a field, and you come to a big stone and that's the canon." So we bade the three wee chicks good bye, and avoiding the dogs, and the carts, and the cow, we went "up there" and came to a large orchard, then woods, then an alfalfa field, and here we were at our own wits end. The best track led down—a rough hill had some tracks but we concluded that led to a house; anyway you went down into a canon, so we kept on. Soon we lost all trace of a road, but it was smooth and level and we kept on. The vistas that opened before us grew more and more enchanting. Every turn gave us a new beauty; we were sure someone had been there before us. We passed an old cedar, and oleander trees in full bloom. The path that had once been a road was gullied by water, and honeycombed by rabbits and squirrels. "There is a house on that hill half a mile away," and for it we aimed. Here was more appearance of road and we zig-zagged up the hill, only to find the house empty and no appearance of life. The outlook was glorious, and we could see appearance of life a mile beyond; so on we pressed, for the sun was getting low and we didn't want to spend the night where wild cats and mountain lions were not uncommon. Down a long hill and up another, but just before reaching the top we turned into a barnyard and came out in front of a good house with all sort of Southern California trees and flowers, etc.; we were all right—had come over an abandoned road. "Beyond was a good road," and we started on a down hill grade.

I kept my eye on the side from which the road was cut, watching the beautiful wild flowers,—on the other side was a deep ravine! Three-fourths of a mile of this steep winding descent and we came to a good level road,—the canon road where we should have come out, if we had turned up the hill instead of down. A short half hour's ride brought us to our home, and a supper that to our mountain appetites, seemed a marvel of culinary art. In telling the story we all said "I'm glad we missed our road,—we can go to a canon any day, but we should never start to take this ride." These cool Southern California nights are splendid for sleeping, and after our exciting ride we enjoyed that one to the full.

CANCERS CURED

After Medicine and Operative Surgery Have Signally Failed.

Cancer has afflicted the human race for more than 2000 years, and medicine has never yet been found to cure this dreadful disease. The malignancy and persistency of cancerous growths have baffled physicians from the earliest ages to the present time.

Thousands and thousands of human beings with cancers have had no hope of relief from their horrible sufferings. Even now cancer causes 40,000 deaths annually in the United States alone, and there is little doubt of its fearful increase. To whatever cause may be attributed the increasing cancer mortality in this country, it is remarkable that it now affects males to a much greater extent than females. The increase among males has been 187 per cent., while in females it has increased only 91 per cent.

Medicines have failed, and operative surgery rarely gives favorable results. However, after the experimentation of ages, at last one master mind has evolved a successful method of treatment.

Dr. E. Holden Lansing of Lewiston, has proven beyond a doubt, that ninety-five per cent. of cancers are curable when subjected to his treatment before the malignancy of the disease has been hastened by the empirics of unskilled practitioners. Moreover, in many cases where others have failed Dr. Lansing has performed a speedy and permanent cure. Testimonials prove all that he claims.

Cancer, or Carcinoma, is a morbid growth, or infiltration in which there is sharp pain, corresponding in its frequency and intensity to the size of the growth, and accompanied by anemia and marked debility. Its cause is unknown, but it most often arises from some injury or local irritation. Its tendency in all cases, if left alone, is death. There are many varieties, each requiring different treatments.

To definitely describe the various forms of cancer would involve much technicality. It would be impossible within the limits of these columns to give an adequate conception of this disease. The main point to the sufferer is the fact that Dr. E. Holden Lansing can be trusted to undertake any case. His superior knowledge can be relied upon, if the sufferer seeks his advice before it is too late. The characteristics of cancer are:—Resistance to all known medicinal agents; proneness to invade other organs and tissues from those in which it has originated; liability to recur after removal by caustics or the surgeon's knife, the pain to which it commonly gives rise, and its tendency to destroy life. Cancer begins as a local disease. It spreads at first in the vicinity of the primary growth or infiltration. If allowed to proceed it will invade the whole body. The growth of a cancer may be compared to a weed in favorable soil. In some persons cancer finds conditions that especially favor its origin and speedy development, while in others a condition is found that resists its deadly germs. Heredity is responsible for favorable conditions, but is not responsible for the origin of the cancer. Cases are continually met with where there is no family history of cancer. "Cancer is not hereditary," or if so only in a limited degree," says Prof. Willard Parker, M. D. It begins as a local disease, positively and purely. It becomes constitutional just as syphilis as a local disease becomes constitutional. The disease occurs in those of vigorous health, instead of being connected with those conditions in which consumption occurs. There is a great parallelism and analogy existing between cancer and syphilis. Both begin by local irritation. The appearance of a cancer on the lip, face or nose, where it is most common, is usually in the form of a small scab or crust. It seems insignificant, and the patient giving it little thought, little realizing the deadly character of the abrasion, perhaps picks off the excrescence. The disease is not picked off so easily. The scab forms again, and perhaps is removed again, but very soon the surface under the scab becomes irritated and raw. I may bleed a little. In a short time an ulcer is formed. In that ulcer exists the cancer germs. Such a one will never heal unless the cancer germs are completely destroyed. Sometimes a cancer first appears in a hardened spot. Not infrequently it arises as a wart, an insignificant tumor, or merely as a swelling. Cancer, being at first a local disease, may attack any irritated surface. A local sore offers a seat for a cancerous growth. Under favorable conditions a cancer may develop even from a simple eruption.
